Tourists, Who Are Blamed for Abnormal Prices

Since 1914 many of the countries of Europe have experienced move-ments of population, both volun-tary and involuntary, that have introduced racial and industrial problems of great magnitude. The re-sults of a first-hand study of the more important of these movements in France, Belgium, Scotland, and other countries where they are most in evidence, are embodied by a representative of The Christian Science Monitor in a series of arti-cles, of which this is the third.

AVIGNON, France—Although Spain supplies the second largest group of foreigners in France, there is a surprising lack of popular interest in them on the part of the French pub-lic. People who are full of ideas about Italians, Poles, Russians and Anglo-Saxons have little to say about the Spaniards, although official fig-ures give their number in France as about 470,000, and it is well known that owing to lax frontier the true number is considerably

There havs always been many Spaniards in southwestern France and the departments near the Py renees and the western Mediterranean renees and the western Mediterranean seaboard, but Spain's neutrality dur-ing the World War placed it in a position, which, coupled with its geographical proximity, resulted in 00 Spaniards entering France to take the places of Frenchmen who were serving in the army. Industrial conditions have been such, following the war, that the great majority of these workers have remained. They are found everywhere, even in the coal mines of northern France.

The Agricultural Worker For several years the position of e French wine industry in the south of France has been very bad. The Gemand for wine steadily decreases and the economic condition of the growers and their dependents is the poorest of any group in France. Most of the hired workers in the vineyards are Spanish, and they share with their employers the bad times which have fallen on the entire wine in

Under these provisions it is certain that the Germans will begin to flow back to Togoland and the Cameroons, which are only held by the French in virtue of the mandate which the League of Nations can renew, withdraw or transfer. Already propaganda in favor of the attribution of teritorial mandates to Germany has made headway. Under the Versailles Treaty France is given full power to admit or exclude the Germans. It is not without significance that France has decided to permit German settlers liberty of movement. They will revive their former relations with the natives, invest capital, and perhaps be allowed to repurchase confiscated plantations. ## GERMAN PAPERS TO BE REVEALED.

Kaiser's Marginal Notes Are Expected to Throw Light on Causes of War

By a Staff Correspondent WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 12 -Something of melodrama tinges disclosures to be made in the secret documents of Prussian diplomacy which Dr. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, RADIO IS LAUDED member of the German peace delega-tion of 1919, is editing for publication by the German Government, Documents containing marginalia from Kaiser Wilhelm which were never intended to see the light, will be published following Germany's decision to give to the world the hidden facts preceding and leading Early next winter the whole series will be out in 55 volumes, compris-ing more than 15,000 documents. Dr. editor of the New York Herald Bartholdy, who is a speaker at the Institute of Politics, says Germany will lay bare the entire records of 43 years of playing the great game of the balance of power." The German Cabinet called Dr. Bartholdy from his university work to Berlin in 1920 for the editorial task, and he has been engaged on it since then.

"Sitting in a small, rather dingy back room at the Foreign Office archives," says Dr. Bartholdy, "with from 20 to 50 volumes of filed docu-ments, secret, most secret, secretis-sima, piled on chairs and sometimes on the floor also, around us, we felt sometimes rather like a small insect working on a tiny little slit in the bark of a big, big tree; but the small creature's steady bite into the wood will be the undoing of all the migntily spread splendor of foliage and fruit-laden boughs."

Secrets of Value

If a spy had broken into the room among the documents with which Dr. Bartholdy has been working, he might have had the chancellories of Critic given openly to the world. Dr. Bartholdy says that the end of such

"But he felt that what the world needed was restoring confidence in a man keeping faith. He gave a great lead to Europe and I think it is up to anyone who likes not only to call himself, but to be, a good European, to follow him in it."

Expects Other Disclosures In publishing the secret archives, Dr. Bartholdy says, he believes Germany's example will almost certainly force similar disclosures from other European countries. The Foreign Office documents, he says, show that the former secrecy veiled "irresponsible letter writing" of German diplomatists. The writers of such etters, he says, believed that their notes were under no circumstances to be shown to the minister of the oreign country "about whose sayings and doings they professed to tell

The 15,000 documents, he says, were selected from other documents which proved on examination to be unimportant. In many cases the documents were filed in two, three or more stages of development, draft and corrections being made by the Secretary of State with second drafts. or a memorandum of a "conversa-

or a memorandum of a "conversation between the Chancellor and the Foreign Secretary." Last of all are the final drafts, with the Kaiser's prarginal notes, in his own hand.

"Since Queen Victoria," Dr. Bartholdy says, "there was no monarch or president of any other county who was tempted in the same way as our Emperor, to have every mood of transient emotion, be it anger or admiration, disappointment or enthusiasm, put into a marginal note on the documents his ministers and ambassadors sent into him." All these are miration, disappointment or enthusiasm, put into a marginal note on the documents his ministers and ambassadors sent into him." All these are soon to be given to the world

The documents will be presented without reserve or extenuations. The primary purpose of the move is to shed light on the issue of whether Germany plotted for the World War. The only reward for the work of editorship; Dr. Bartholdy says, is "the belief in its necessity." Opening the archives and putting the secret documents before the world, he says, "amounts to a judgment."

Anyone who gives such judgment, he says, definitely and mercilessly pledges himself to refrain from doing the thing which he condemns. Germany intends to show, Dr. Bartholdy says, that its former rulers "sinned through carelessness and ignorance more than from bad intention." Nevertheless, the act of placing the secret documents in the full light of day will be a pledge against a repetition of the act in the future.

The work of editing was begun in 1920, and continued to June, 1926, with Dr. Friedrich Thimme chief editor in the later years. The printers now have the full material, and it will be published early this winter.

GERMANS FAVOR SPAIN'S CLAIMS

Reich Unwilling, However, to Agree to Seat for Poland on League Council

By Wireless

BERLIN, Aug. 13-Dr. Gustav Stresemann, the Foreign Minister, will speak today on the foreign political situation before the Cabinet, which has just resumed its work enc with Frank Dow, assistant to after its summer vacation. The principal problem on hand is Germany's expected entrance into the League of Nations next month.

The Reich, however, it is stated here, will not send a delegation to Geneva until it is assured that it will be accepted as a member of the League, for it does not want a repetition of the happenings of last March. The German delegation, therefore, will probably not be present at Geneva the day the session is opened.

Germany is perfectly willing to make concessions to Spain but is opposed to doing so to Poland. for the granting of a permanent seat to Poland would strengthen the anti-German forces of the League, it is believed here.

Another problem occupying the German Foreign Minister is the pur-chase of Eupen-Malmedy from Belgium, which is a district Germany was compelled to cede to that nation under the treaty of Versailles, Negotiations have been carried on already for more than a year and so far have been quite successful.

Purchase of Saar Mines

The return of Eupen-Malmedy to Germany, however, would make a change in the German frontiers as laid down in the Treaty of Versailles, and the question raised here is whether Germany and Belgium can settle this by themselves or whether all other signatory powers to the Treaty of Versailles must be asked; furthermore, if Germany becomes a member of the League, whether the League has anything to say on this matter.

YOU MAY KNOW Cape Cod very well indeed, and still you may have missed Cataumet, for Cataumet is a quiet place out of the way and not a bit "smart" in the modern sense of the word.

Yet you may be one to whom a spot like Scraggy Neck, at Cataumet on Buzzards Bay, appeals more strongly than does the more sophisticated and fashionable type of Summer Colony. For here is a place where a few families have been coming for many years, a substantial and conservative community of spacious homes, good tennis courts and broad lawns sloping down to the bay where many a crack yacht club sailing master had his first lesson at the sheet of one of the little white sail boats.

Two of the estates like this, at Cataumet, are on Scraggy Neck, a beautiful peninsula, completely surrounded by the sea, except for the short and narrow causeway that joins it to the rest of the Cape.

It is beautiful. Here are almost 350 acres of woodland with more than 3½ miles of high breezy shore, an excellent bathing beach, anchorage facilities and float for small boats and mooring place for yachts up to ten-foot draught, all per-manently reserved for those who decide to establish their estates at Scraggy Neck.

Less than fifteen minutes away by motor is an excellent eighteen hole golf course, and Boston itself is only sixty miles distant by rail.

The present owners of Scraggy Neck have been coming here for more than forty years, and they will retain their residences, while opening a portion of the Neck to a gradual and conservative development of a non-speculative character, subject to rigid social and building restrictions. Large lots are reasonably priced at $4000.00 and upwards-

Write the agents for more information regarding this unusual place. It will not obligate you, and an opportunity to obtain an estate of fair size and much desired privacy in such surroundings is at least worth hearing about-

Lecturer on History of Drama Discusses Contrast in Motifs CAMPAIGN RALLY

Professor Nichol of University of London Finds Stress Laid on Acting, in American School, While English Work on Ingredients

the University of London, has been impressed by discovering that, whereas the motif of work in the spreads to the full width of the stage. There is no scene shifting, no footlights. A floodlight rally will be held in Springfield for the western part of the State, to be whereas the motif of work in the drama at his university is the training of students in the ingredients and appreciation of good plays, never in acting them, the trend of academic work in the drama in the United States is predominantly toward the developing and schooling of student histricing nower, with the major histrionic power, with the major proportion of such power apparently ocused on acting.

In the spacious quiet of Professor Cram's house in Frisbie Place, characteristic setting of the older Cambridge, Professor Nichol will, with his return to England but a fortnight away, discuss contrasts he has found here with his work in Lon-don. Whimsically he will set 6 o'clock, with its lengthened lilac shadows, as hour for the discussion He will lend to even his most care ful explanations an errant humor and a constant reference for verification to the opinions of Mrs. Nichol, who. sitting calmly upon an hassock, will negate the weight of burdens of re-sponsibility for practical organiza-tion of the work Professor Nichol has set himself to carry on.

Believes in Dramatic Research

The work began with Professor Nichol's conviction that the drama should be definitely approached as a drama." research subject. He had no faith in teaching students the content of the drama by training them to act. "We do not," he will say, "believe we should allow students to waste their time believing they may become actors, trying to do so. Out here I know, for instance, that your Professor Baker's extraordinarily inter esting 47 Workshop was concerned with training students to act. That they were schooled variously, as well, in the theories and practices of lighting, costuming, scenic design. We have nothing like that. I, who have never been an actor, cannot teach people to act.

"Oh, I should think we have quite as many students, proportionately, as there are here who believe they should become actors. The point is that such students may not do so at the University of London. I should think that many an otherwise good student of the natural sciences, or of history, or the modern languages, has been quite put off from obtain-ing their degrees by studying, vainly, to learn acting. To be sure, to act is more pleasant than 'swotting' for an examination, as we say. But there are specific institutions in London for the training of actors, very good ones, indeed, and we do not impete with them.

"Thus we have made it an enormously stern rule that our students may come, watch our plays for a few pence and study the historic movement of which the plays are a visua representation. But they may not share at all in the production of the plays. The acting is secondary to the motive of the play anyhow and the indices of its period, and while the acting of our plays is entertaining and often beautifully achieved i of relative importance compared the fundamental theories of the

RETENTION OF SKYSCRAPER CITY IS LINKED WITH SPACE ECONOMY

European Use of Arcades Studied to Help Solve New York | It Served for De Luxe Travel Problems-Underground Garages and Sidewalks Among Traffic Relief Plans Recommended

NEW YORK-A way in which New ork may continue to develop without outgrowing its grorund space has been worked out by J. E. Harmittee of the Broadway Association. The curtailment of the skyscraper,

The curtailment of the skyscraper, which has been considered seriously lately in order to keep the traffic from becoming too heavy for New York City's streets, would not be necessary under Mr. Harrington's plan, which has just, been made public. Arcades, underground parking spaces, and sidewalks cut under buildings are features of the plan. Just as the architect, in replacing a five-story building with one of 30 stories provides for aditional, "vertical transportation" by putting 30 elevators into the new building instead of the two that were adequate for the old, just so should he provide for additional "horizontal transportation," Mr. Harrington holds, by

"This may at first appear as an expensive use of the land on the ground floor," Mr. Harrington said, "but where it has been done in other cities, especially in Europe, it has been found profitable. Small stores built on these arcades are very profitable to the owner of the building and produces more rent than restaurants, barber shops, or other lines now located in the rear end of a building, which is the least desirable portion of it.

It is planned eventually to develop in Dover and Westwood a big Boy Scout center comparable to that which now exists in Palisades Park, on the Hudson River, at Bear Moundaid, and at other places in the United States. Already, in addition to Camp Storrow, there is Scoutland, prices were generally increased 25 the first time.

Troop No. 3 of Dorchester, the Edison Company troop, already has a cabin under construction on one of the hills, sites have been reserved by Troop 5, Dorchester, and other Scout groups, and it is expected that the cabins have been served by as many Scout troops.

BAN IS ASKED ON FOX HUNTING

British S. P. C. A. Is Requested to Explain Its Attitude

Special from Monitor Bureau

LONDON—Henry B. Amos; secre-tary of the League for the Prohibi-tion of Cruel Sports, in a statement to the press, urges the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Ani-mals to clear up without delay its attitude toward fox-bunting and other outdoor "diversions," which, he says, is causing serious disquiet among many humanitarians all over the British Isles. "No one will wish to criticize unduly a society like the R. S. P. C. A., which is doing such a good work, both for animals and the community." he writes and continues: "There is, however, a limit to such an attitude, and the recent annual meeting of the society raises the ruestion whether, by its tacit acquiescence in the cruelties associated with blood-sports, the R. S. P. C. A. foes not give sanction to a double standard of morality in our relations with animals.

"Let me illustrate. Suppose anyne were to go into his back garden and with his terrier worry a neighoor's cat; he would be sent to prison or a month or more for cruelty. But suppose this same person joined a back and, with from 30 to 50 dogs kept for the purpose, chased a fox for wo or three hours, and finally, when the poor animal was dead-beat and found even his 'earth' blocked against him, worried him to death. the hunter would not only get off scot-free, but it would be said of him he was engaged in a 'noble sport. Now, why should the greater rime go unpunished? That such 'sports' should be organized for 'pleasure' is humiliating enough. But that they should be in-dulged in mainly by the best edu-cated, the richest, and the most influential people in the land, and in-directly buttressed by our leading animal welfare society, is surely a painful reflection to all who are to build up, in any way, a ruly healthy and righteous civiliza-

FRANCE INVADED BY LABOR HOSTS

Government, like that of Italy, is making strenuous efforts to maintain the interest of these Poles in open dislike is shown by the French couraged by providing Polish priests at work which promise to overcome all these efforts directed from the mother country. These Poles were which the Frenchman himself has to accustomed to one of the lowest standards of living in all Europe before they came to France. They lived on the land, were harried by wars, starved when crops failed and were taxed to the limit. The change in their living conditions, even in the still war-marked districts of northern France and western Belgium, is so much for the better that the two can hardly be compared.

The Polish Miner

In France the Polish family whose father is a miner lives in a new sixroom cottage built according to the very latest ideas in housing and vil-lage planning. They have electric light, hot water from the pithead in many instances, a good-sized vege-table garden with an adequate allowployment rather than make the short journey from the British coal fields to the fields of northern France. Those in charge of the actual operation of the French mines say that the reason is that the British miners are "trop prétentieux," a phrase which may be taken to mean that they expect too much.

Cost of Llving

Based on the figures for 1914 as 100, the cost of living in France is now about 457. In general, wages have either conformed to this ratio or have improved upon it. Living standards for the general run of workers all over France have never been so high, nor has legislation to safeguard the interests of the work-ers ever been so highly developed. These laws are strictly enforced and the native French workers see to it that the foreign workers are as well protected as themselves, in order not to develop a class of workers who might find favor with employers be cause of less onerous restrictions.

Up to this time there has been little effort to persuade any of the foreign workers in France to become French citizens, and in fact the law made this a slow and tedious process. A bill has now passed the Senate re-ducing the period required from ten to three years, or in cases where the applicant has served in an Allied army, or has a French diploma, to one year. It is very probable that this bill will become a law. The real this bill will become a law. Increasitest will come when France, having absorbed all the foreign workers it requires, puts up real barriers at its frontiers, such as the United States has done. When that time arrives the foreign worker in France will have to make up his mind as to his future allegiance, and ewerything now fore-seeable points to his choosing France for his country.

Attitude of French

While the problem of the British is unemployment, that of the French is employment, and the latter is causing as much worry as the former. It is certainly true that next to the plight of the franc, there is no subject of such widespread interest among the native French as the discussion of the 3,000,000 foreigners who have come to live in France. Of these various groups the Italians, Spaniards and Poles have been de-act other's countries.

Two of the remaining groups, the Russians with about 90,000 and the Czechs with about 40,000 are finding a reasonably cordial welcome in France. Russians of the upper classes were always popular in France, in pre-war days, and make France in pre-war days, and many Russians now driving taxicabs, working as dishwashers or waiters in restaurants, or serving in other menial capacities are said to have been affluent visitors and ready spenders in pre-war France. Their plight is truly pitiable, yet they carry on in the face of all difficulties and long for the day when a different régime in Russia will make it possible for them to see their native

Czechs Returning Home

Of all foreign groups who come to France to earn a livelihood the Czechs are far and away the best, but for a number of reasons they are preferring to return to Czechoslo-vakia and their numbers in France are declining. They came to Paris at a time when the exchanges turned their French wages into twice what they would have been at home. Now the tables are turned so far as monetary affairs are concerned; stabilization is a fact in Czechoslo-vakia, while in France the franc

It is a thoroughly understandable state of mind, but rather annoying to the foreigner, who perhaps knows enough about economics and foreign exchange to know that if it were not for the vast sums being spent in France by foreigners the exchanges would be a great deal worse than they are. It has been estimated by bankers in a position to form reliable opinions that from the first of April to the first of October this year the three main tourist groups will spend an average of $5,000,000 a day in France.

Taxation of Foreigner

The rather natural reaction to their feelings on the part of the French has been a determination to make the foreigner pay through the nose for everything he buys. Laxury make the foreigner pay through the plants, and are allowed seven tons of coal a year for their domestic use. Furthermore, they have exchanged the long, grinding day of the agricultural worker for a definite eighthour, six-day week.

In view of all this, it is natural to ask why British coal miners, with living conditions far below those just described and with generations of experience in coal-getting behind them, have remained in their condition of squalor and chronic unemployment rather than make the short

French industries. A large volume of unemployment, with 3,000,000 non-French workers in France, is a prob-

It is these economic factors that are causing hard thinking in France rather than the fears expressed by the more superficial thinkers that France is in any danger of losing its identity through having to assimilate millions of foreigners.

In order to get a crowd about him a street vender drew from his pocket a dollar bill and called for bids. "What am I offered for this dollar?" he shouted.

Bids came slowly from a few skeptical listeners who gathered. Finally a boy bid 40 cents.

Before he handed it to the boy he asked for the 40 cents.

"Just take it out of the dollar, and give me the change," replied the lad.

The issue will increase to about 9,000,000 the number of outstanding shares of General Motors common stock, with a total of 10,000,000 authorized. The common stock at present stands at 5,800,000 shares. It is listed at no par value, but the price at the closing just preceding the dividend declaration stood at 203½, which would make its valuation $1,180,000,000 at present, or $1,780,000,000 if the stock remains at that level after the incomplete that

The announcement of the stock dividend declaration brought less of a flurry on the New York Stock Ex-change than might have been exected, because the move had been sold at its lowest level for the y ar, 113%, and most of the rise to the present 203% occurred recently.

The corporation has paid its regular quarterly dividends of $1.75 on common stock this year, in addition to extra dividends of $5 a share on Jan. 7 and $4 a share on July 2, and the announcement of the pres-ent stock dividend carried with it the announcement that the regular quarterly dividend would also be paid on the new stock as well as on the old.

Sir Flinders Petrie, who is called by the magazine, Nature, the "foremost Egyptologist in the world," treats the subject exhaustively and authoritatively and his knowledge of the texts of the "Book of the Dead" and of the arc' eological material which has been found in Egypt and elsewhere enables him to add in several instances to Professor Fes-senden's proofs. Sir Flinders Petrie's summary of his conclusions is

"It appears, then, that the cultural connections of the earliest Egyptians. as well as the physical descriptions in their mythology, point to the Caucasus region. When, further, we find there the names of the principal places of the mythology in their relative positions, it gives strong grounds for regarding that region as the homeland of the earliest civilization of the Egyptians."

It was for this reason that England was glad that Italy should find new interests in Abyssinia. Although the whole business smacks of prewar diplomacy in the creation of zones of interest, there is a general seeling of relief in the rest of nent seat at such an inopportune moment. The action which Brazil took was not due to the insistence of the South American states that they should be better represented upon the Council of the League, for most of these states reprudited Bramanding permanent seats, which meant that England and France did not see eye to eye, Brazil would probably not have put in its claim. of zones of interest, there is a gen-eral feeling of relief in the rest of Europe that Ital; should have ob-tained an outlet for its energies. It is possible that when Brazil and Spain realize how much they will lose in A Diplomatic Struggle

Meanwhile behind the scenes diplomatic struggle in the Balkans where Signor Mussolini seems to have scored for the moment by draw-ing Rumania and Greece nearer to Italy. Dr. Bénès, who is the real ruler of Czechoslovakia, is obviously embarrassed by Signor Mussolini's embarrassed by Signor Mussolin's move on the chessboard of the Balkans, while Dr. Ninchitch, the Foreign Secretary of Jugoslavia, keeps a wary eye upon all that is going on, determined to be friends with both France and Italy, if he can.

The question for Europe is, Will the League spirit prevail and will the nations concerned use the mation in the work of the League.

No Further Obstacles

If Poland retrains from pressing its claim there seems no reason why the League of Nations should not give Germany a unanimous invitation to take its seat on the Council in September. Indeed it is so absolutely vital, to the interests of Europe that Germany should come into the League, for the pact of security for the Rhine frontier cannot otherwise come into force, that after the shock which was administered to the League in March there is not the nations concerned use the machinery of arbitration which they have established at Geneva for the settlement of their differences, or will the spirit of nationalism and militarism break out again in some unexpected quarter with such violence as to endanger the peace of Europe?

The Oriental Rug Industry

By DICKRAN P. CHUTJIAN

THE Oriental rug has a quality peculiar to itself; it speaks of national traditions, of tribes and families. Many surviving rugs will get from his client his choice of the most ancient of the industrial arts, was probably practiced before Ra was worshiped at Heliopolis or the Propose ruled in Egypt, or the Pharaohs ruled in Egypt, or the order, giving out the work to Babylonia's glories incited her ene-the different looms in the different mies to conquest. Certainly this art is one of the earliest forms in which paying the operators so much a line is one of the earliest torms in which humanity gave expression to its idea of what is beautiful. So old, indeed, is this industry that the story of the first loom lies shrouded in the wavering mists of legend preceding the clear dawn of authentic history.

While the Babylonians and Egyp- appearance. tians each claimed precedence in the art, Pliny declared in favor of Egypt, saying it was for this reason that the goddess Isis was represented with a shuttle in her hand, to signify that

Only the rich or the religious were thus honored.

In Olden Days weaving of the rug denoted it by the manner of portrayal of this symbol.

Years ago every Oriental home on its native soil had its own looms. Weaving was the home industry. Even wandering shepherds wove in

It is a custom in the Orient for families to live together for two or three generations. The woman with the greatest ability as a weaver became the leader of the women at the looms, and likewise the ablest men at the looms established a domination over the men. These chiefs divided the work to be done and gave it out to those who were best fitted to perform it. Some were given the work of combing the wool, to others

In Persia the rich rulers, or Shahs, produced marvelous rugs for their palaces. Only in palaces can now be seen in Eastern countries rugs and carpets of that type. They are centuries old and priceless. These rugs were not made with the thought of selling; only when the people were in financial trouble and distress did it become a habit to part with them. Then these masterpieces sold at a very low price compared with their true value and many of them came into the United States. Formerly these old rugs constituted 90 percent of the rugs coming into this country. Today 'hey, are only 1 percent of the imports.

Commercialization of the Craft
There is a demand for rugs with the old subdued colors. As there are not enough of the antique rugs to supply the demand, there is a call for imitation to meet the market. These new rugs are weven upon modern looms and each worker is skilled only in that particular part of the weaving in which he has been instructed. Thus the whole industry has teen commercialized.

OMPETITION between the two Canadian railways—the National and the Canadian Pacific—is providing a remarkably high grade of service for the public. The National system, when it was organized, had the alternative of offering a service on a parity with that rendered by its predecessors, the Canadian Northern, Grand Trunk and other lines comprising the present system, or of improving its standards and equipment to a point where it could effectively compete with the C. P. R.

It chose the latter course. New steel cars have been built, the most modern type of motive power purchased for the heavy traffic lines, a dining-car service equaled by few roads on the continent has been built up and an active advertising and traffic, solicitation canadian angus compared to incomplete the continent has been built up and an active advertising and traffic, solicitation canadian processing the present structure of the heavy traffic and processing the present structure of the processing the processin By FRANKLIN SNOW

Under the guidance of Sir Henry W.
Thornton, chairman and president, to whom credit is given for the showing made by the National Railways, the operating costs have been reduced annually and gross and net earnings increased regularly. In 1925 an operating surplus (before fixed charges which are theoretically applied against debts of the former companies now a part of the National System) of $32,000,000 was achieved. In the six years since 1920, the extreme swing between the deficit of $34,000,000 in that year and the figures for 1925 was $66,000,000, or an average annual improvement of $11,000,000 a year.

The operating ratio has been reduced gradually from 105 per cent in 1920 to 86.3 per cent in 1926 Officials of the road intimate that a net of $40,000,000 is indicated for 1926, with a corresponding reduction in the operating ratio, Standards of Service operating costs have been reduced an-

are not unusual, on the busy routes.

Each road seeks to attract business on the standpoint of service rendered and in consequence the public benefits through the competition. The Canadian National does not solicit business on the grounds of "patronize the road you own and thereby reduce your own taxes." Its appeal is solely on its ability as a common carrier.

It has had to overcome the prestige which the Canadian Pacific had built up through years of efficient public service and has, in the last five years, been developing a reputation of its own.

service and has, in the last five years, been developing a reputation of its own.

A National System

Officials of the National Rallway make no apologies for, nor boasts of, being a national transportation system. Their attitude is that the nationalization of the former roads in cluding the Canadian Northern, Grand Trunk, National Transcontinental, and other lines, was a necessity because of the staggering public debt which these roads were pilling up.

Sir Henry states that the C. N. R. is not in itself an argument in favor of government management of railroads and should not be so used in the United States, where conditions differ and where no need exists for government operation. The ofhy claim that the officials of the Canadian National make is that they have proved that their road can be operated efficiently, can be kept free from politics, and that employees "do not roll over and go to sleep because they are working for the Government rather than for a private railway."

A cursory inspection of the Canadian National has 22,000 miles of road and the C. P. R. 13,000 miles of Smooth handling of passenger trains characterizes the service and employees are uniformly loyal to the company and its management. When questioned concerning the volume of traffic obtained in comparison with the principal competitor, several stated, "We are getting more than our share."

While heavy capital costs were incurred in bringing the road up to its present standards, the crest of the capital expenditures has been reached a high official of the road said. From now on, the purchase of new cars and locomotives will be more in the nature of current replacements, rather than

Then very soon breakfast was over trotted around, contented and happy, and Mother and Daddy drove of to town. Frances was still sitting at the deserted table thinking of her ruined day, when she heard Bobby's voice the big swing in the yard where they are the ward ward ward where "Where's Mother?" he demanded and sang songs in the sunshine.

Now Bobby was pretty good at helping himself for such a little boy, but there were certain buttons which seemed too much for his small fingers and these Frances soon but-toned for him and then they went downstairs together.

While he sat on his high chair eating his breakfast, Frances went to the telephone. "Oh, Jean," she said when she had made her confection, "I cannot play any tennis with you teday. Mother has gone to town to help Aunt Bess and I'm on duty for the day."
"That's all right," said Jean's voice cheerfully, "I'm on duty too. Mother is canning peaches today and I'm helping her. You know its lots easier to can peaches when somebody helps."

Frances sat down in her place at the breakfast table, and her face was Frances washed them.

"Where's Mother?" he demanded when he saw Frances.

"Mother's gone to town to help Aunt Bess," Frances answered.

For a moment Bobby's round little face looked troubled, then a smile brightened it. "Sister will help Bobby," he said. "Of course sister will help Bobby." said Frances, smillibel Bobby.

"Bobby helped," said Bobby "Yes Bobby and I were links, weren't we Bobs?" said Frances.

"Yes," said Bobby nodding his head wisely.

Mother looked puzzled and Frances laughed. "I'll tell you some time what I mean," she said.

CONSIDERABLE -LIQUIDATION ENCOUNTERED

Price Movements Are Erratic, With Heavy Selling in Leading Stocks

NEW YORK Aug. 13 (P)—Heavy liquidation inspired by the unexpected increase in the New York Federal Reserve rediscount rate and the traditional "selling on the good news" following the announcement of the 50 per cent stock dividend on General Motors imparted a decidedly reactionary tone to prices at the opening of today's stock market.

TELEPHONE CO. DEVELOPMENT

Important Field Opened Up in Italy-Earnings Are Encouraging

NEW YORK, Aug. 13-In obtaining the contract from the Italian Government for the modernization of Italy's long distance telephone systems, the International Telephone & Telegraph 57% Corporation, through its subsidiaries has opened up an entirely new and important field of operations.

The International Standard Electric

The International Standard Electric Corporation, formerly the International Western Electric Corporation, and affiliated companies in Italy, will install an underground long-distance service connecting the most important cities with up-to-date facilities. The work will be spread over a period of five years, and will involve approximately $20,000,000.

This is the second important European country in which International has obtained a contract for revamping the telephone system. Work of installing an automatic system in Spain has been under way for some time.

International's Earnings

International's Earnings

Earnings of International Telephone from new propert's and projects are more than keeping pace with the in-creased capital issued to finance ex-Sosthenes Behn, president, stated at the time of the recent stock offering that the earnings of the company in the first six months of this year were sufficient to cover dividend require-ments for the full year on the present 392,139 shares outstanding and div-$92,139 shares outstanding and div-idends for the last quarter on the 196,new shares, indicating carnings on the old capitalization. The stock is now on a $6 annual basis.

Net earnings in 1925 were equivalent to $16.82 on the 356,399 shares outstanding in that year. In view of the important growth made this year and the increased business and larger profits of the various subsidiaries, it is not unlikely that earnings per share in 1926 on the 589,000 stock outstanding at that time will be within strik-ing distance of the record made last year. Sales of the new stock at $100 a share in the ratio of one new share for each two now held will bring approximately $20,900,900 into the treasury. This money was raised preparatory to taking the Italian contracts and for other development. A total of $55,000,000 new capital has been raised in less than a year. in less than a year.

Although $14.50 was paid late last calender week for choice fat lambs, $14.25 was the high mark late this week, the bulk of which going at $14 to $14.25. Natives were then on a $13.25 to $13.50 basis, culls selling at $9 to $9.50. Yearling wethers cashed at $10.50 to $11.50, and fat ewes $6 to $7.25. Feeder lambs scaling $7 to 73 pounds cashed at $12.75 to $15.75.

EXTENSION OF BRANCH BANKING

CHICAGO, Aug. 13—Leading executives of both national and state banks, members of the American Bankers Association, have organized a committee of one hundred to launch a nation-wide campaign to safeguard the future existence of independent banking throughout the United States by arousing bankers, business men and farmers to the dangers of a spread of branch banking beyond the 22 states in which it is now permitted by state law.

Members of the A. B. A., who are opposed to a further extension of branch banking, will ask the Association at its next national convention to re-endorse the McFadden Banking Bill as amended by the so-called Hull Amendments. This convention will be held in Los Angeles, Oct. 4 to 7 inclusive, and the legislative battle of the last session of Congress, when the branch banking section of the McFadden Bill caused that measure to fail to pass, will be reported.

Special from Monitor Bureau

CHICAGO, Aug. 13—More surprises were anticipated today as a result of two upsets yesferday in the annual united States juniors' and boys' tennis championship tournament of the United States Tennis Association on the grass courts of the South Side Tennis Club here. Yesterday's reversals came in quarter-final junior singles.

Two favorites were eliminated when Berkeley R. Bell of Austin, Tex., an outstanding choice, was defeated by Julius Seligsen of New York, and Bentaria E. Conchayoff of Los Angels.

seligson was expected to give Bell a steady battle, but the Texan had been going so good, showing remarkable improvement in the all-around speed of his play, that no one expected him to defeat himself. Bell hit out of side and baselines by inches on many shots, and popped others into the net. Even his noted service went poorly. Anticipation proved to be the best quality in Seligson's game. Though short and stout, the New Yorker of a cat. He often started well in advance of Bell's return stroke, but the Texan failed to take advantage of this to cross him up. Seligson's steadiness, working his rival's backhand relentlessly, completely downed the Texan Seligson got everything back and won practically every extended rally. He didn't hit the ball hard nor place many out of reach, but there was something on the ball that made it hard for Bell to handle.

Pare played one of the best games of his career to defeat Gorchakoff. The latter made the mistake of attacking Pare's backhand, formerly the Chicagoan's weakness. Pare, however,

In boys' semifinals, W. F. Coen Jr. of Kansas City today meets Keith E. Gledhill of Santa Barbara, while W. L. O'Loughlin of Pittsburgh meets Sidney B. Wood of Forest Hills, N. Y. The doubles champions were eliminated in another junior surprise when Malcolm T. Hill and Henry L. Johnson Jr. of Waban. Mass., fell before Pare and Seller by a score of 4—6, 7—5, 6—3. The latter pair co-ordinated well, Pare scoring on sharp crosscourt drives, while Seller smashed everything at the net.

"Ladies Like to Listen In"

MATEUR radio is by no means confined to the men folks. Indeed, we have it on good authority that the A "ladies like to listen in," too. and in the above picture we find two feminine fans listening to a sister fan. Incidentally, the ladies shown above are at Station 2-EV, in Brooklyn, while the lady sending them a message happens to be in Australia, half around the world. But what are a few miles when a lady wants to lister re male in the above picture is the owner of Station 2-EV. Miss Anastasia Reilly is seated.

'er is the other lady, and J. L. Kilpatrick is the gentleman who has offered them to talk with Miss Beryl Mills over in Sydney.

Keep Out Slums

The housing reformer today is determined that new slums must not be allowed to come into existence—and he is getting support from the schools. The department of educations of the control schools. The department of education which is co-operating in this tion which is co-operating in this object is concerned with domestic and housewifery subjects. The ordinary cooking and housewifery lessons are, of course, a continual help. But the lessons that are specially to the point are those dealing with the various domestic sanitary conveniences the provision of which has often been lacking in the old house property, and for the proper use of which, therefore, instruction is needed to supply the place of experience. Further valuable help is forthcoming in the shape of lessons dealing with the wise utilization of household waste and the protection and preservation of the building.

In order that this department of the work may be more readily carried out, teachers aim to reproduce, so far as possible, the actual conditions of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes will result thems of the new housing schemes will result thems of the new housing schemes will result thems of house life in the school work it is hoped that the new housing schemes, and house hold with the new housing schemes will result thems of the new housing schemes will result thems of the new housing schemes and doors.

Where a flat or house is attached to the school this is readily accomplished. In other cases the room set apart for the domestic instruction is made to yield as much experience as possible.

House Training for Boys The need is being recognized, too for bringing boys as well as girls into touch with instruction which aims at preserving good housing standards. The share of the man in the work of the house is a definite and a large one. The boys should be prepared for this by training in the school garden

VANCOUVER TIMBER SENT TO LANCASHIRE

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON-The Panama Canal has broken Scandinavia's century-old monopoly of the profitable trade of supplying Britain with timber for railway ties. This announcement is made here in connection with the arrival at Garston, Lancashire, of 2,000,000 feet of Douglas fir from British Columbia for this purpose. one. The boys should be prepared for this by training in the school garden and the handleraft room. The transformation of a housing estate which can be wrought by the cultivation of the little plots of ground surrounding the houses is so striking that the ambition of the boys can easily be fired in this direction.

Boys will take a great deal of pride and will develop their aftistic spirit and craftsmanship in the making of cabinets, corner cupboards, and similar household conveniences. And they

Tickets on Fur Coats Name Furs

When you buy a fur coat at Read'n you know exactly what you are getting without asking—the precise names of the furs are on the tickets. If it is a Hudson seal, we explain that it is really dyed northern muskrat. When furs are dyed, we tell you so. In addition to these fur facts given on the tickets, our salespeople are glad to tell customers about the various furs' wearing qualities, their fashion standing this season and any other facts you may wish to know. Prices on furs mean nothing unless you really know furs and are able to ascertain their quality, color matching and durability. All furs arriving in the store are theroughly understood and no information is concealed. Read's has had a fine fur reputation for 69 years. Our standards of quality and service are as exacting as when the store was founded.

Do not fail to visit the Store during these Mid-Summer Sale Days—each day presents many new and interesting values of appealing prices.

The sine die adjournment of the Nine-Power Conference, met to deal with the complicated question of a revision of China's custom tariffs, is regrettable, but was inevitable. With sincere intent to give the big Asian Republic such actual control of its revenues as would comport truly with sovereignty.

The Chinese Customs Postponement

and with a patient persistency which perhaps never before has been shown in similar international concerns, the representatives of Belgium and France, Great Britain and Holland, Italy and Japan, Portugal and the United States, for more than eight months sought to find some reasonably promising solution to a most trying problem. On July 3 they gave it up and returned to their several capitals.

And the blame-for blame is the proper word, albeit this never can be other than a postponement of the matter-rests wholly on Chinese conditions. For the one essential, common to all the many plans considered, was that there should be at Peking a central government consistently able to prove itself a government in fact and not mere form; a government whose power could reach out beyond the antique city's walls and make itself continuingly respected through the eighteen provinces. Failing this, no agreement by which Peking's receipts should be increased could do more than increase by just that much the sinews of war enjoyed by whichever of the distressed land's four or five politico-military groups might then hold the capital. And this is no more than to say: Perpetuate a civil war, to do away with which was the background reason for the conference.

Toward the close of the long-drawn-out sessions, it had been hoped that the defeat of General Feng's west China forces and the fall of the city before the combined attacks of Marshals Chang and Wu, would lead to some solution of the Nation's greatest problem through a modus operandi to be mutually supported by those two super-tuchuns. Wu and Chang, however, could not agree: did not agree certainly. Orientals both, they followed once again that bad old policy of laissez faire, which throughout all time has been so sadly characteristic of that side of the world where time counts for next to nothing. With no chance, then, of having to do with a government in any real sense of the wor the conferees gave up their attempt.

Let it be repeated that the overvishing majority of those who speak of the 'ar East from adequate study or observation scree that this must prove only a postperment. It has been recognized increasing cough late years that the Yellow Reports should have genuine control of its fin-co. The Arms Conference, held at Washington in the spring of 1922, set the seal of of all approval to this, so far as the nine states gost intimately interested were concerned. They have tried to find and follow through a plan, and for the time have failed. Hor, soon it may seem advisable to make a nes try, and whether or no success then shall , aplant what now is defeat, depends on-China.

It was more than a mere coincidence that two articles appeared on adjoining pages in the

Steady March Against Liquor

Monitor the other day recording definite testimony that the world is moving steadily against drink. The one told of a statement made by the Rev. James Muir who appeared before the assembly of the United

Free Church of Scotland and moved the adoption of the report of its committee on temperance. The other gave the views of William E. ("Pussyfoot") Johnson, immediately on his return from the international conference of the World League Against Alcoholism in Estonia. For these two articles in reality simply represented two well-defined pieces of evidence that, despite all that opponents of prohibition may say in the United States or elsewhere, those with eyes to see the true state of affairs are gaining an increasing conviction that the movement against alcohol is far past the experimental stage and that it is only a matter of time before the whole world will be lined up on the side of

Mr. Muir is authority for the statement that, although there were signs that great dividends were coming to those who carried on the trade, there were also signs that the drink traffic was on the decline. It is reported, he declared, that drunkenness in certain villages has entirely disappeared, thereby more than justifying by results the Temperance Act of Scotland. Johnson urged that everywhere the drink traffic is "up against it." "Every government," he declared, "takes upon itself more or less to restrict its drink traffic. From restriction to prohibition is only a step." And he gave as the result of his observation the fact that on all sides there is a distinct tendency toward greater sobriety. "You have got everywhere," he added, "a soberer sentiment. It is all a sign that the movement of the World League Against Alcoholism is steadily marching on toward a universal veto, and there is no need to force methods to advance it.'

In this last statement Mr. Johnson pointed to a fact which merits serious thought. Even those most strongly in favor of prohibition sometimes seem to feel that there is need to force methods to advance the reform. It is true that the employment of adequate measures to insure observance of the law is appropriate and indeed essential, but unless, back of this activity, there lies a recognition of the power inherent in the reform, with a fitting confidence in its efficacy, those measures will largely fail of their success It is unquestionable that behind the movement for prohibition, exemplified particularly in the United States, is a great body of moral sentiment the power of which can hardly be overestimated. That sentiment represents the advancing force of good manifesting itself in human consciousness, and can be trusted to increase and expand with the years. The universal veto of alcohol, of which Mr. Johnson speaks, is a matter virtually of patient endeavor based upon a realization of the inevitable unfoldment of good in individual and national consciousness.

A very distinguished woman, member of the British House of Commons, visiting the United States, called attention to the curious fact that, in the country in which woman suffrage first found recognition in the law, the women holding high political office have in the majority of cases done so as the residuary

The Widow in Politics

legatees of departed husbands. Three women now sit in the House of Representatives. All three are the widows of former congressmen. In an earlier Congress the daughter of a deceased Senator was seated. It is impossible to escape the conclusion that their elections were rather the outcome of sympathy than of deliberate political judgment. It is not harsh to say that none of them have particularly distinguished themselves in the national legislature, but the same judgment would apply to four-fifths of the men in that

In a southern state the spectacle has been for years presented of a woman elected Governor now charged with acting merely as the agent of her husband, whose offenses, while in that office, caused him to be disbarred from holding political place again. In Kentucky the wife of a congressman now serving a term in jail for complicity in liquor frauds has been nominated to his seat in Congress. In more than one district widows are seeking nominations to succeed their late husbands.

This is a development of woman suffrage in the United States which must be rather disconcerting to its devoted advocates. It is quite true that the basic idea of the suffrage campaign was not especially to put women into posts of political importance, but rather to render the abstract justice of conferring belatedly upon women the same political rights as are enjoyed by men. Such militant suffragists of the olden days as Susan B. Anthony or Lucy Stone Blackwell would probably have been greatly disconcerted had they foreseen that much of women's most active participation in politics would take the form of sentimental appeals for place, based on bereavement or an alleged desire to vindicate a malefactor husband.

Probably this is but a passing political phase, but it would be a serviceable act if the great organizations of women in the United States, which possess such wide influence, would exert themselves to speed its passing. Great Britain, which granted votes to women after the United States had recognized the justice of that course, has not been afflicted with this form of sentiment in politics. Her women members of Parliament have fought for their places, not inherited them from a husband. Equal rights for women has not there been construed as special privileges for widows. Doubtless in time the specious chivalry which leads some American political organizations to make use of important public offices as a means of expressing sympathy in a bereavement will be

Because of the tragic sequence to events in the Balkans in 1914, there is a tendency to regard the merest incident there as a mustard seed which may grow into a tall tree overnight; and hence much is being said of the menace to peace which the Macedonian frontier raids constitute. Incursions over the Serbian border have, it is alleged, been made by the comitadji, or irregular bands, and Jugoslavia, in conjunction with its neighbors Greece and Rumania, is demanding the extradition of the leaders and compenation for the dependents of the gendarmes who have fallen in the raids. It also demands that there shall be a complete disbandment of the comitadii.

Incidents on the Jugoslav Frontier

To these demands it is expected Bulgaria will reiterate that, while it is unable, with its inadequate military force, to suppress the movement altogether, it will do its utmost to restrain the activities of the irregular bands. Bulgaria is poor financially, and it is ill equipped to deal with the Macedonian revolutionary organization, which is composed of "desperate men who," as the Sofia papers say, "feel that their people, many of whom are scattered over the face of the earth, have been terribly wronged." Moreover, Bulgaria does not conceal its feeling that Macedonia should either be given its independence or be, at least in a large part of its territory, returned to Bulgaria.

the complications the British Government, it is reported, has entered in an endeavor to help bring about an amicable settlement offering friendly advice both to the Jugoslav and the Bulgarian Governments. That no appeal has been made to the League of Nations may be taken as a sign of promise of a solution being reached through direct negotiation. The League would much prefer that the parties involved settle the question themselves, but It holds itself ready to mediate should an appeal be made from either side. It is easy to exaggerate the importance of frontier incidents in the Balkans. And while it would be unwise to underrate them, their seriousness lies less in the possibility of their precipitating immediate strife than in the check they exert on the friendly relations which have been developing recently between Serbians and Bulgarians. Only a few months ago a competent observer, Mikhail Belazelkoff, said: "Serbians and Bulgarians get along together without the slightest friction in Macedonia. The cities of Macedonia are self-governing. We elect our mayors, vote on such matters as municipal expenditures and enterprises and send our representatives to participate in the proceedings of the Skupshtina, or Parliament, at Belgrade. The only difficulty still to be overcome is Belgrade's persistence in forbidding Bulgarian schools and churches."

.The whole statement evidences the development of a friendly feeling, and, although the recurrence of incidents on the frontier may retard the growth of that feeling, there is every reason to believe that the sane views of both countries will prevail, and that the efforts to obliterate the bitterness of the past and launch upon an era of co-operation will not have been

and thereby became a professional player, she took a step which will probably have a more important bearing on the question of amateur lawn tennis than any which had ever been previously taken. The fact that the champion of the world had turned professional may have been a matter of great moment in itself; but its importance in that direction was as almost nothing when compared to the effect which it will probably have on lawn tennis in general.

With the possible exception of summer baseball and the school and college player, there has not been any sport which has had so many views on what makes a player a professional as has been the case with lawn tennis during the past few years. When Maurice E. McLoughlin, the famous "Comet" from the Pacific coast, was holding the championship of the United States, his amateur standing was under discussion because he was in the sporting goods trade and handled tennis equipment. Later the amateur standings of William T. Tilden 2d, United States champion, and Vincent Richards, third ranking player of the United States, were questioned because they were writing articles on tennis. That these players could not continue their selling and writing activities and continue to be amateurs at the same time, was the opinion of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and as a result they gave up such activities as were not acceptable to the rule-makers of the game and remained in the amateur ranks.

In the past there have been very few of the good amateur tennis players who have turned professional, either to receive money from the actual playing of the game, or by what might be termed "side issues." Harvey D. Snodgrass of San Francisco is probably the most prominent player who became a professional before Mlle. Lenglen joined the professionals; but it is confidently predicted that the next few months will find a number of good tennis players deserting the amateur ranks. It is by the example set by Mlle. Lenglen that tennis is going to be affected most. It is going to mean a larger field of professional activities in this sport, with the result that those rated as amateurs will be amateurs in every sense of the word, and those rated as professionals will real professionals. In other words, the "doubtful" class will become definitely located.

Another development which is practically sure to result from Mile. Lenglen's move is the instituting of the open lawn tennis tournament, the same as is the case with golf, court tennis, squash tennis and some other athletic activities in which amateurs are privileged to meet professionals. As to just why there have never been open lawn tennis tournaments no one seems to be able satisfactorily to explain; but a number of persons who have been and still are actively connected with either the playing or the rule-making end of the game are ready to admit that all that is needed to bring about open tournaments on the tennis court is a larger body of professional players and a demand for such tournaments. With Mile. Lenglen a professional and soon to tour the United States, it is going to be only a short time before both of the above-named conditions are fulfilled

Editorial Notes

It may be presumed that William M. Jardine, United States Secretary of Agriculture, knew nereof he was speaking, when he declared the other day, during the eighth annual farm and home week held in Amherst, Mass., held under the auspices of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, that in the last few years New England has made more progress than any other part. of the country agriculturally. And when he urged his hearers to take advantage of the local markets, "which are the envy of the world," to organize on a sound basis, to employ efficient business methods to the marketing of their products, to capitalize on the tremendous improvement shown in this section in the last few years, and to specialize in raising perishable products, he specified in a few words the great need of New England's agriculture today. This is just how he put it:

"Industrialism" has made it imperative that you reorganize, but if you do that you can't help making prox-ress. Don't get the idea that it will be easy. New Eng-land will always have keen competition. It is no day for nineteenth century methods. . . Keep in step, learn the value of advertising, and remember, above all things, there is always a market for quality. Take advantage of your wonderful markets and don't bother about a foreign market. You don't need to compete with European agriculture or with the large middle western farmers.

A striking conclusion is drawn in the report, recently published as an official blue book of the British Government regarding the marketing of fruits in Great Britain, to the effect that the only practicable method whereby an increase of the consumption of home products in preference to imports from foreign countries can be obtained is by a system of voluntary preference by the consumer. It appears that out of one hundred apples eaten in Great Britain in 1924, thirtyeight were supplied by the United States, and of the bananas used twenty-three out of thirty consumed came from Central America and Jamaica through an organization under American control; also, while the actual amount used was not large, it is recorded that 72 per cent of the grapefruit consumed came from the United States, while of the seventy oranges consumed per capita fifty-seven were supplied by Spain. Little by little it is apparently becoming recognized that moral force is a far more powerful agency for good than any physical impulsion and that, in the case of a nation as of an individual. trusting to honor is exceedingly likely to produce satisfactory results.

A Daughter of the Russian Revolution

acquainted with her at a session of the Vutsik, or Ukrainian Soviet Executive Committee, four years ago. I had recently come to Russia, and the spectacle of a woman dressed in plain clothes and wearing a typical peasant kerchief over her head sitting in the highest legislative assembly of the country was still something of a

Mrs. Chernisheva invited me to visit the textile factory near Kharkov, where she was one of the three mem-bers of the managing board. Her real function, as I learned, was to serve as a sort of buffer and intermediary between the workers and the management.

It was in the early days of the Soviet New Econom Policy, when the feeling of the workers against anyone who belonged to the old propertied and educated classes was even stronger than it is at present. But the Soviet regime had not yet developed a sufficient number of red" specialists who were competent to direct the indus trial enterprises.

In this textile factory the chief engineer was a man quite notoriously out of sympathy with the new order; his son had fought with the Whites and later fled from the country. But his technical knowledge and experience were necessary for the successful operation of the factory Chernisheva, herself a former working woman, was put on the board of management to act as a bridge between this old regime specialist and the workers.

Without interfering in the technical details of management, she was supposed, on the one hand, to see that the old-time specialist did not commit any willful sabotage in managing the factory and, on the other, to use her influence and authority with the workers to induce them to observe labor discipline.

As one accompanied Olga Chernisheva through the fac-tory and visited with her the new institutions which had prung up to improve the life of the workers-the nursery the kindergarten, the school for the children of the workers-one could not escape the impression that in her was embodied a new, interesting type of character, a true daughter of the Russian Revolution.

Whatever one might think of her political and economic views, there was no mistaking the strength and sincerity of her character, or her honest devotion to the working class, from which she had sprung. As I became better acquainted with Comrade Chernisheva (one somehow ildn't apply such a conventional prefix as Mrs. to ber) I learned by degrees the story of her life; and it is a story that seems worth telling, just as an illustration of the human forces that are behind those impersonal terms. Soviets, Communist Party, etc.

Olga Chernisheva was sprung from a very poor peasant family in the Province of Tver. There was no revolutionary influence in her childhood; she only knew the simple traditional life of the peasants, with its habitual poverty and grinding toil, and its occasional outbursts of rough merrymaking at weddings and holidays. She had a little schooling, but was soon taken away from school and sent to work in a textile factory. She was married at eighteen (a customary age for the marriage of Russian peasant girls) and went with her husband to live in Leningrad, where they both worked in a factory. During all this time there was no trace of radicalism

TER name was Olga Chernisheva and I became i in Chernisheva's life; in fact, she was quite religious and made frequent pilgrimages to churches and monasteries.

The World War brought a decisive change in her life.

Her husband perished at the front and she found her meager wages insufficient to care for her young daughter. So she went to the Tsar's daughter, who headed a comon for the relief of soldiers' wives, and asked for help. But her plea was rejected; it seems that her husband's record for discipline had not been good.

Chernisheva went away with a sense of bitter injustice. "If my child had been a kitten or a puppy, you would have done more for it." From that time Chernisheva was more and more attracted to the underground circles which the revolutionary agitators kept alive even during the period of war and severe police repression.

After the fall of the old regime in March, 1917, she joined the Communist Party, or the Bolsheviki, as they were then called, under the influence of another worker who had been for a long time active in the revolutionary

The one-time peasant girl, who had formerly been so religious and bowed before the images of the saints, now threw herself into the whirling storm of revolution with all the ardor of her character. Knocked down and bruised in street demonstrations before the Bolshevist Revolution of November, 1917, her record after November was a kaleidoscopic series of varied and strenuous activities.

The great impersonal organism of the Communist Party took her, as it did many others, and threw her from one stormy scene to another. First she was at the front against the Germans in the short-lived period between the revolution and the Peace of Brest-Litovsk.

Later she found herself in a peasant village in the remote Don country, where she was supposed to carry on party agitation and educational work. This experience was rudely interrupted when the Cossack cavalry of General Denikin broke through the Red front in this region; and Chernisheva barely escaped to Kiev, whence she returned to Petrograd, just at the moment when that city was threatened by the advance of the White Army of Judenitch.

Here she sat as a member of one of the revolutionary tribunals which, just as in the days of the French Revolu-tion, meted out stern treatment to people convicted of aiding the counter-revolution.

"It was useless to give people prison sentences in those days," Chernisheva said, "because they thought Judenitch would come any day and release them. In order to create a deterring impression, the tribunal had to execute active counter-revolutionists. Lighter cases were punished with

The beroic and terrible period of the Revolution is over today; but Chernisheva, now a member of the executive committee of the Soviet Trade Union Council, is still indefatigably at work in her party duties, struggling to educate and protect women workers, to insure that they really enjoy the equality with men to which they are

Her daughter, Valia, who was the unconscious cause of her turn to revolutionary activity, is now an active member of the Young Pioneers, the organization of Russian children which to some extent parallels the Boy Scouts in its work.

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in London

THEPHERDESS-WALK, adjoining the Regent's Caual, has a pretty rural sound and conjures up a picture of leafy lanes, cool water and grazing cows. Actuit is just beyond the congested confines of the city, and is an area which has been condemned by the authorities as unfit for habitation. So it is to be cleared and the Lord Mayor has laid the foundation of a block of buildings which will accommodate some 600 persons. The aldings will be of the balcony type, and there will be 104 flats, of different sizes. These have been so arranged that practically all the living and bed rooms will face the garden which is to be one of the features of the plan-ning. Each flat will have a kitchenette, with electric light, gas stoves, larder, bathroom, and hot and cold water supply. It is entirely a city project, the cost of the buildings being borne by the corporation without assistance from the Exchequer, and is a beginning of the solving of problem of doing away with unsuitable housing for city dwellers and providing up-to-date conditions.

A novel competition in house furnishing is to take place this autumn. A well-known architect has designed an allconcrete house of special beauty which is to be part of the prize in the competition. The winner will be the person who, in the opinion of the judges, furnishes and decorates the house in the best tasic. The house will be on the outskirts of London, and will be open to any competitor who can view the rooms and then draw up plans for furnishing, regardless of cost. He, or she, will have at his disposal catalogues covering the whole needs of a home-wall papers, pictures, furniture, rugs, hardware, gas cookers, etc. Except for certain wood paneling, the be bare, for the competitors to exercise their skill upon. And the winner will get the lot—freehold, house, furniture, fitments, paneling and all.

"Fear God; honor the King.' If you do that, you will get on very well in Australia. Read Psalm 15; remember it, and you will know the definition of a real gentle man," was the advice given by Admiral H. H. Campbell to a group of nineteen lads leaving England to seek careers for themselves in Australia. The boys represent the fifth group sent out by the Overseas Settlement Committee, and all arrangements have been made assuring them good start and unbounded opportunity in the great island Psalm 15 reads in part: "He that leadeth an uncorrupt life; and doeth the thing which is right, and speaketh the truth from his heart. . . He that sweareth unto his neighbor and disappointeth him not; though it were to his own hindrance . . . Whoso doeth these things shall never fail."

The commercial value of long-distance air postal service has been demonstrated in connection with the flight from London to Australia of Alan Cobham. A British company which owns a tract of land aggregating 9,000,000 acres in northern Australia wished to communicate with its manager, but his headquarters are far from any established quick means of communication. Hearing that Mr Cobham would fly over that part of Australia on his way to the settled eastern part of the continent, he was asked he would carry a letter for the company. He agreed and although his unexpected delay at Basra has hindered him somewhat, he will arrive at the company's headquar-ters weeks before mail would arrive there in the ordinary Madame Tussaud's famous waxwork exhibition, known all over the world and regarded as a feature of London life for ninety years until its destruction last year, is to be rebuilt. The old site will be retained, but the new struc-ture will be much more extensive than the old one. The so-called chamber of horrors, which would have been almost impossible to replace, was not destroyed. The molds of all the figures in the exhibition were kept in another part of London, and consequently it will be possible to reproduce everything except a few of the genuine Napoleonic relies, although exact measurements of these are known, and the new exhibits will be just as valuable from an educational point of view.

The village of St. Helen's, in the Isle of Wight, once the haunt of smugglers, has put forward its claim to being the most moral village in the Kingdom. So well-behaved and peace-loving are the villagers that the local police sta-tion has been closed, no constable is maintained, and the only thing that savors of the law is the occasional visit of a constable from Seaview, several miles away, who sometimes rides over on his bicycle to pass the time of day with the village folk. For years, however, there has been nothing for him to do. In the past things were quite different, and the revenue officers of the Crown were continually harrying the smugglers of contraband who found the village a convenient way station on their jour-ney from the Continent to London. With the suppres-sion of smuggling the town settled down to its present happy and uneventful life. + + +

Sayings of the week: Nothing is done in this world without talk; that is why there is so little done.—Percival Gibbon.

In spite of Sunday motoring, Sunday walking, and even Sunday cinemas, any good preacher can attract a larger congregation to his church or chapel than ever before.—Lieutenant-Commander Kenworthy, M. P.

The faith in reason is, of all enthusiasms, perhaps the rarest .- H. N. Brailsford.

We think much more about art than we did at the time when all the works of man seemed to be spontaneously beautiful, but we do not achieve much.—Dean Inge.

We must shake ourselves free from the old orthodoxies about capitalism and labor, which have no relevance to the world now, or that in which we are entering. We should try to reach a common goal in each industry, securing to the men greater employment and closer identity of interests with the fortunes of the firm in return for whole-hearted work free from hampering restrictions .-

You cannot restore a 1914 world any more than you can restore the one that Noah lost when he embarked in the ark. The world today is entirely different and demands a new outlook and a new policy.-Leopold C. Amery.

The Discovery by Leif Ericson

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: About a year ago the Moniron reported at length the about a year ago the Montron reported at length the celebration of an association of Norse-Americans, held, if I remember rightly, in one of the cities of the State of Minnesota. This convention was addressed by a number of noted persons and gained quite a degree of well-deserved prominence, not only in the United States, but also abroad in those countries most interested.

Several of the speakers stressed the commonly accepted story of the discovery of America by Leif Ericson in the

Inspired partly by these speeches and partly because the subject has always been of very great interest to me, I wrote a short article on it which appeared in the New Orleans Times Picayune. In it I referred to the fact which seems to be so little considered—especially, perhaps, by the founders of Columbus Day—namely, that Christopher Columbus never set foot on North American

I then sent a clipping of the above to a friend in Washington, D. C., whose father was an officer in the Norwe-gian Navy, and her answer may prove as interesting to others as it was to me. Here is what she wrote: "In the Scandinavian schools when we are taught what happened in the year 1000, Leif Ericson comes in, as a mat-ter of course, as America's discoverer. Centuries later Columbus comes in, in due course. We settled all that up North long ago, and make no particular 'to do' about it. So you see that all this ignoring of the real discoverer and boosting the claims of Columbus all the time amuses us Norse people very much, though we are too polite to laugh out loud."

In view of the recent discoveries of Norse ruins by Professor Opsion as reported in the Moniton of July 7, the above may prove of current interest and value to those who have been following the subject.
